EFFECT: Limits cybercrimes involving the intent to commit another crime by specifying that the defendant must intend to commit another crime in violation of a state law not included within the bill. Modifies crimes of Electronic Data Tampering in the first and second degree created in the bill by specifying that the crimes are committed when someone alters data as it transits between two data systems over an open network (rather than two computers over an open network). Modifies the definition of "without authorization" by specifying that knowingly circumventing technological access barriers could include illicit elevation of privileges beyond those intentionally granted (rather than normally granted).
